TRANSLATION Of the Notification of the Siamese Government probibling the experiation of Rice and Paddy for 1865 and ending on the 20th of August should there then be a fair prospect of a good incoming crop. Otherwiss to be continued another year. Ilis Excellency Chow Paya Puna Krano, Ministe of Poreign Affairs, begs to notify the Consuls of the various Treaty Powers that the Rulings Authorities of Siam, having unanimously consulted together, in struct me to notify you that in the year of the Rat Sixth of the Decade, the lith of the Reign of Hist cintucts Majesty, the present Riog, the Rica plants. tions of the West were overflowed the other plants.

tions suffered from drought. The people who cultiunis the rice fields in teme introces, tralice two lenths in some in tenes one-tenth; and in some instances the Rice is a complete failure. Monied men under excitement have been buying up vice till it lies rises to two treats per bucket. It has now failen to 12 of a tiest per bucket. Paddy however, is still firm, 60 to 76 k chis per coven for good or in-fer or. The price of rice does not decrease. It is dear all through the provinces, and in the Capital. The people of the Privinces, the poor and the ombarrasied, who have b tthe means to purchase grain must seek in the forests wild yams, and gother bambon seeds to est justead of rice, sometimes they seek other substances and mix with rice for food. All are sufferers to a great extent. The present has re ched a crisis, which the Kngdear-destitution, Should the experiation of rice not be closed, this poor people will murmaringly cry out the contracting powers have mutually agreed upon provisions for the relief of the destitute, but the guardians of that Treaties in behalf of His Majesty the King, and the Consuls in behalf of Ferelen countries, do not devise the means for the relief of the poor as provided for in these Treatles."

Though Article of the English Treaty, says Whenever a scarcity may be apprehended of Sall Rico and Fish, the Siamese Government reserve; themselves the right of prohibiting, by public proclamation, the expertation of these articles." The 6th Article of the agreement appended to the English Treate, says :- That a mouth's botice shall be given by the Siamete Authorities to the Consul, prim to the enforcement of the prohibition. and that British subjects who may prortously obtain ready parchased, may do so even after the probibition comes in force." The 20th Article of the French Presty says. cerning, rice, fish and salt :- Toutefois le Couvernoment Sinnies se reserve la faculté d'interdire la sortie du sel, da ris et de poisson pour le cas on il y auroit lieu d'apprenender que discrie dans le Royaumo de Sism, blais, cette interdiction, qui devra tee jublice un moir à l'avance, ne saurait avoir audeun effet retrosclif. Noahmoins, les négociants Français devrant svertie l'autorite des achats qu'ils auront faits autorieurement a la prohibition. Likewise in the Treaties which other countries have made, the stipulations are similar. Sech are the stipulations of the Trenties. TIME that on the danger becoming pressing and palpuble, Imperial agaistance will be afforded; but that is not likely to happen until Mandarin exact new shade of colour, Silk Lustres, Alpuscus &c. tions shall have made the Fuhkien people disuffeetad and rebellions. But a new and a very grave difficulty has to be faced by the Mandarius. It is superflueur to state in this place, that through the active interference of British forces the Taipings were expelled from The "United Service" leaves this the valley of the Yangtere, and that but for such active interference, the rich provinces of Chekiang and Kiaugeu, certainly, if not all the provinces

South of the Yangetze, would have been in the Peking, ever do arous to serve the Imperial cause, endcayoured to force on the Prince Kung some eyelem of williter even risation, by distating the erms on which British subjects might be por mitted to serve in the Mandarin ranks. The Prince replied to the tenor and effect, that Britich subjects in Linperial pay were Chinese servants, and must exclusively obey the orders of the Mandarius and that British troops in British pay must in like manner exclusively obey the orders of their government, who might either cause them to remain in China to protect British interests, or withdraw them as might be deemed most expedient. But His Lighness seemed to repudiate the principle that the Imperial Government was responsible for the safety of British life and property within its jurisdiction. The roply was as unfriendly, repollent, and smedal a rebuff, as was ever administered in diplomatic Boots.

Such a tone of correspondence could hardly be otherwise than extremely unpalatable to the British government, who unturally would under such gircumstances study exclusively the national intercets confided to them. They have seen that the Muritime Quetom revenue, which they have at such pains secured to the Mandarin government, instead, of heing a source of strength became a source of weakness, for the revenue thus derived being relied on for the wunts of the court, and the extraordinary requirements of the army, the regular sources of revenue were allowed to go by the cose end, and the roise of administration became abandoned accordingly. And new, when the Oustoms duties amount to a sum which prior to the system of foreign inspectorate, would have been deemed fabulous, it is relied on for so many accessities, that it is absurbed in anticipation without in the least producing the effect intended. And in the same manner the British Government have seen the radial protection extended to the open ports, and the presence of British forces stationed on the spot, abused and also made a source of weakness instead of strongth. For the Mandarine relying on this sure mantle of protection, (which also secured to them both free comved of the apprehension of destruction, and son- perienced assistants at reasonable charges. munications and the customs revenue) were reliesequently indulged in apathy, vanelity, and impravticability to the top of their bont. And although the efforts to force on them a system of military organisation proved both successful and effective so long as their danger was imminous, still on the rebellion being driven back to where it could and did recover itself, the Mandarina not only relapsed sed, but actually become repellent, and insolent to yard.
